IUCr Young Scientists Awards

The International Union of Crystallography (IUCr) has offered its generous support to assist the young scientists to participate in this workshop through IUCr Young Scientist Award.

Terms & Conditions:

- Awards for young scientists will be used solely for travel, accommodation and Subsistence expenses and not as a waiver of registration fees or for poster prizes, etc.
- Young scientists are graduate students, post-graduate students or post-doctoral fellows with a maximum age of 30 (exceptionally 35).
- Preference will be given to those young scientists who have a background in crystallography and have published in IUCr journals (preferably).
- young scientists from developing countries, particularly in Latin America, Africa and South East Asia.

Application submission deadline for this award is 05 January 2020. All the applications will be reviewed by the evaluation committee. Decision of your selection will be communicated by 15 January, 2020. The successful applicants will be expected to initiate their visa application process soon afterwards. The successful applicants will be entitled for a 50% reduction in their registration fee (they will be allowed to pay on desk), economy class return air ticket upto maximum USD 700 (amount will be reimbursed upon showing their boarding pass), accommodation and meals during the period of workshop. Equal opportunity for both genders.

To apply for the award, please submit the online application form.

Please also send the PDF of the submitted form alongwith a letter of support from your mentor/supervisor to
